ENVIRON to launch CRC audit tool at Carbon Show 2010

1 October 2010 – International environmental and health sciences consultancy ENVIRON is to launch a new CRC audit tool at the Carbon Show this Monday, 4 October.

The 'Carbon Compliance Tool' is designed to assist environmental managers, property managers, building surveyors and small and medium sized business capture and store the information required by the CRC Energy Efficiency Scheme auditing process. As well as incorporating details of a company's supply and energy usage, the tool includes contract start and end details, invoice details and Annual Quantities (AQs), bringing a greater commercial focus to energy monitoring requirements.

Steve Barlow, Principal at ENVIRON said:

"One in five businesses will be audited from April next year as part of the CRC process. This tool has been designed to capture and store all the relevant details needed so that audit reports can be generated at the push of a button as soon as they're needed.

"By steering away from all but the most essential functions – which are useful for drilling right down into the detail but not vital for the auditing process – we have been able to develop a package that is easy to use and cost effective."

Other features include:

- Web based system allowing easy access to central data point for all CRC Evidence Pack requirements
- Multi level password access
- Can be integrated into client's existing data collation software tools
- Collates and checks invoice data against contract records
- Retains utility contract data
- Stores local manual meter readings
- Retains work log queries
- Can hold indefinite number of fuel records
- Produces easy to understand reports to allow management to make decisions on CRC credit purchasing
